MONEY MUSEUM

Money is one of the few things common to all modern countries – it forms a bond which allows modern societies to function. Money is also much more than this: it reflects the history, aspirations, and culture of the society that issues it. Modern currency shares two common aspects; its form and the types of messages and images used on them.

It comes in three tangible forms; as coinage, as banknotes, or in electronic form accessible through credit, debit or “smart” cards.

Developed for National Coin Week 2008, this exhibit features coins and currency from the world’s major economies, and includes money made from new materials, such as polymer plastic notes as well as bimetallic and aluminum coins, plus a discussion of the history of credit cards.

Bring the story of global economics as seen through the prism of money to your school, museum, club, church or convention by reserving this exhibit from the ANA Money Museum today.
