The History of Chinese Coinage

The George A. Fisher, Jr. Memorial Exhibit was produced in memory of one of the most prominent American scholars of Chinese numismatics. As a volunteer at the American Numismatic Association Money Museum, George was instrumental in organizing and expanding the Far Eastern collections, especially the Chinese section. This exhibit draws on that collection and his work to create an overview of Chinese numismatic history.

Learn about the history of money in China, and how early money consisted of pearls, jade, gold, spades and knives. Explore how Chinese money eventually settled on a single form — the classic round Pan Liang coin with a square hole in the middle. For nearly two thousand years traditional cash coins retained a similar appearance with only minor variations in script and design until the 20th century and the end of the Qing dynasty. Also included in this exhibit are many examples of money in unusual shapes and forms.

Bring the story of Chinese coinage to your school, bank, club or convention today by reserving this exhibit from the ANA Money Museum.
