

ANA OFFERS SERVICES TO ANS MEMBERS

The American Numismatic Association (ANA) is prepared to offer some services to its sister organization, the American Numismatic Society (ANS).

"The ANA is here to help the ANS, which is currently reorganizing its staff as it plans to move its headquarters in New York City," ANA Executive Director Edward C. Rochette says. "Our offer is intended as a temporary measure during ANS's transition to allow its members access to the wide variety of numismatic services currently enjoyed by the ANA's more than 29,000 members."

Among the services being offered are:

- Access to the ANA library - the world's largest circulating library of numismatic material - including its thorough research services
- Use of attribution services by ANA Authentication Bureau experts
- Availability of the ANA's expeditious photography services
- Participation in the ANA's expanded Summer Seminar program

In addition, the ANA is prepared to help the ANS maintain its web site and assist in maintaining the organization's museum cabinet data base.

Arthur Houghton, immediate past president of the ANS, says, "We at the ANS welcome the statement of support from our sister organization - the American Numismatic Association. I thank the ANA for its generous offer."
